The Fruit of Violation In no case is the folly of violence in medi ation more conspicuously shown by its fruit than in the effect upon the intestines of excessive purgation. The stomach and bowels ere first painfull griped, then the latter opiously, suddenly and repeatedly evacu- led by Sir William Whitway. The copiously, suddenly and repeatedly evacuated. This is far beyond the necessities of the case, most unnatural, excessively debilitating. The organs are incapacitated from resuming their function with normal moderation. A stringent is resorted to which reduces them to their former condition of inaction. To this monstrous and harmful absurdity, Hostetter's stomach Bitters is the happy alternative. It relaxes gently, naturally, sufficently, it diverts bile from the blood into its proper channel, it insures healthful digestion and complete assimilation. It is a complete defence against malatia, and conquers rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, kidney and bladder trouble.

New York, Nov. 7 .- The Tribune says: It is not a new or an unusual thing to have a Republican Presidential victory followed by defeats next year. A host of such illustrations may be given. These changes are commonly expected by politicians as a sort of reaction after the effort and excitement of the Presidential year. So common have they been that it has really seemed as if the people with kindly sagacity deliberately chose the year after a victory to administer to the Republican party any needed discipline for over-confidence or lack of proper organization or effort, the misconduct of managers or any other fault, so that it might have ample time to correct its short-comings before another national contest.

THE business side of life in the East is entitled to a long credit mark in its favor. Some time ago a man named Kavanaugh was indicted in Chicago for attempting to bribe jurors in the Cronin case. Being confronted with his accusers he confessed his crime, but thus far he has not disclosed his principals. It now develops that though Kavanaugh, prior to his arrest, was in good commercial business with partners, since the discovery of his infamy the business world and the people generally have refused to have anything more to do with the Kavanaugh firm. It has been "boycotted," so to speak, until it has been forced to appeal to the Courts to have its accounts settled, the firm dissolved and Kavanaugh's name legally eliminsted from any connection with the business. Of course, the innocent partners are the greater sufferers, but the people would not buy of a firm that divided any of its profits with the wretch who attempted to poison the fount of justice. This, says the Record-Union, is gratifying testimony that the sterling men of the country not only will not pass such crimes idly by, but will punish them by a withdrawal of patronage from the offenders. In fact, business has conscience after all.

A NEW YORK paper says, in reference to the marriage of Miss Huntington and a German Prince: "It is certainly quite natural that foreigners should desire American wives. There are no more fascinating women in the world than those reared under our simple Republican institutions."

The good qualities of American girls do not seem to have so much weight with foreign Princes as their financial standing. We do not hear of any poor American girls being picked up by these susceptible foreign gentlemen. The Call says: "If Prince Hatzfeldt or Prince Murat had fallen in love with American girls of ordinary fortune there would have been some basis for the conclusion that the superior fascinations of American women were the reason why they were chosen in preference to European ladies of rank corresponding to that of the Princes. But it is always the fortunes of American girls that the foreign Princes are after. If the pile of money is not stacked up high enough the foreign Prince goes off in a huff. There is nothing about alliances of this character creditable either to the American girls or the Princes their money enables them to marry.

' A NEW gunpowder has been invented which is likely to supersede all others for military and sporting purposes. It is prepared from straw, which is pulverized, chemiically treated and finished in granular form for use. It is claimed that this powder is smokeless, flameless, practically non-fouling and non-heating, and that both recoil and report are less than those of black powder, with superior penetrative power. From the powerful character of this explosive, which weight for weight, is 150 per cent. stronger than gunpowder and is not explodable by concussion, it is hoped that in a compressed form it will be found applicable for blasting purposes.

A CHINAMAN told Judge Sawyer a day or two ago that he had married a Chinese woman, and after living with her a month had sold her for $1,545. The San Francisco Chronicle says: "There are some things about our boasted modern and Western civilization which will not stand the test of comparison with the civilization of the

A NEWSPAPER paragraph estimates that there are 800,000 railroad employes in the United States who receive annually $400,000,000, an average of $500 each. It is probable that the number of employes now reaches nearer 900,000.

CRACKER COURTSHIP.

How "Pop" Won the Hand of an Industrious Widow.

Love-Making as Practiced in an Unknow Nook of Florids—The Way in Which Old Man Somers Presented His Case to Mrs. Legare.

Down in this unknown nook characters may be met who would delight those appreciative of the fresh and distinctive in human nature, writes a New York Tribune correspondent from Lady Lake, Fla. Here in the deepest recesses of "the piney woods" are "crackers" who have never penetrated ten miles from the smoky cabins an which they were born, and whose domes-tic life has been bounded by the live-oak logs, clay walls and paimetto thatch-of their cabins. Here they have lived since the time, back in the 130s, when Oscoola and his Seminoles were captured by the regulars or driven to the gators, moccasins and miasma swamps of the Everglades. Indolence, ignorance, shiftlessness, courage and pride are their more prominent gualities.

Some miles back from this lake is a ferfile tract of "high hummock" land on which stands a particularly heavy and iuxuriant growth of pine, magnolia and live-oak. In it are several clearings which were made some four or five decades since, by the first "crackers" who came to this section, at the time of their arrival a wild and virgin country, which foot of white and virgin country, which foot of white man may not have trodden since Ponce de Leon ranged the peninsula in his quest for the fabled fountain of youth. Three of the clearings are clustered close-

Three of the clearings are clustered closely together, one owned by the Widow Legare (pronounced Legree), one by "Pop" Somers and the third by "Uncle Billy" Thomas. Uncle Billy has contrived to pass sixly-three years in single blessedness, but during the last eight years he has found engrossing charms in the society of the widow. On the other hand "Pop" has had three wiges, the last in the sequence having three wives, the last in the sequence having died a month ago. It is in order to state that "Pop" is a man of individuality, not given to inaction and vain repining when he has suffered a loss. Misfortune has a he has suffered a loss. Misfortune has a bracing effect on him and stim lates him to repair his losses. Consequently I was not surprised at the turn a conversation took which I held with him a fortnight after the death of his third wife. Replying to some expressions of sympathy on my part, the old man said:

"Yes, Yank, I've done lost er good house-keeper. So my cabin his in mighty pore ways. So of co'se I've done bin reckonin' for ernuther wife. I haint settled on none yit, as I've done bin right tollerble busy."

"I'll resk it, Yank," said the old man.
"Ther widder haint brought Uncle Billy ter mite in much as nigh eight years. But I'll speak ter her come week.

Just then the circuit rider done come 'long, and I done told cuit rider done come 'long, and I done told the widder that we'd hitch our hands to-gether right thar and save time and be through wi' it. But she said that thar wasn't no way to be married, and 'lowed she wanted to ride 'roun by Uncle Billy's right away and be married much as nigher fortnight after. Wall, ther widder done moves to the rule behindt me and we rid mounted ther mule behindt me and we rid ter Uncle Bille's, who was so 'gasted (amazed) that he couldn't even cuss."

The wedding took place next day, the circuit rider officiating. My present to the bride was an engraving picturing the story of Young Lochlavar. The bridal journey was taken on muleback.

Married the Wrong Woman.

There is a legend told in a great Yorkshire town to the effect that, after several couples had been simultaneously married at the parish church, one bride found her bridegroom walking away with another lady on his arm. The curate, summoned to her aid, remonstrated with the defaulter and besought him to take his proper partner. "Nay," said he, "aw was married to this 'un, and I loike her t' best." There is no reason why this should not be sober truth. couples had been simultaneously married at Rudeness in Speech. Rudeness in Speech.

Some pride themselves upon saying rude things. They fancy they have done a smart thing when they have given a rugged, coarse rebuff. We have known some Christian men to be very unchristian in this particular. All such ought to ponder this remark, made by one of the greatest of great men: "Sir, a man has no more right to say an uncivil thing than to act one—no great men: "Sir, a man has no more right to say an uncivil thing than to act one—no more right to say a rude thing to another than to knock him down."

Croup Can be Prevented

We want every mother to know that croup can be prevented. There is no question about this; as it has been done in thousands of cases, and you may depend upon it that when a child takes the croup, it is owing to the negligence of its parents. True croup never appears without due and timely warning; a few hours, or a day before the attack, the child becomes hoarse. This hoarseness is the first indication of croup, and is a sure sign that croup is to follow, unless promptly and properly treated. The free use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed with each bottle, under the heading "To prayent croup" will dispel all symptoms of the disease. For sals by Osburn & Shoemaker.

The Best There Is.

A new typewriter has been invented Remington and all of the Caligraph. It has no ribbon, no wooden bars, but is all steel, prints true and without any blur. It costs an even hundred dollars, and is worth two of any other machine. It prints better, wears longer, is easier to learn and works faster, besides other recommendations. C. A. BRAGG, Agent.

There is but little, if any danger from whooping cough, when the cough is kept loose and expectoration easy, which can always be done by the free use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger in giv-ing it to children as it contains no

A PIUTE FUNERAL,

People's Burial Customs.

Yesterday's Winnemucca Silver State says: Charley, the Indian who killed himself night before last by sending a bullet through his brain, was buried yesterday all the same as 'Merican man. The body was put in a rough box and carried in an Indian sagebrush wagon, in which was the wife of the deceased and her stepmother and two or three bucks. Charley was a young man and his wife, who has a papoose less than a year old, wept bitterly. The body was buried across the river where an old Indian known as Tom was laid away.

When the whites first came here, and, in fact, until quite recently, the Indians buried their dead in loose rocks on the mountain side or piled sagebrush on them if they they were too far from the mountains. It was also the custom to burn everything, even the wickiup, of the deceased. Now, however, they are adopting the customs of the whites and put the dead in boxes and bury them in the ground and dispose of anything val-uable owned by the deceased.

UNCLE SAM'S HORSES.

Something About the Government's Four-Footed Stock.

All Animals Are Required to Conform with Certain Regulations-A Horse Generally Lasts Six Years and Is Then Sold by Auction.

Whenever, upon the occasion of any pub lic parade, the cavalry stationed at the gar-rison at Fort Myer forms part of the procession, the magnificent appearance of the horses excites the universal admiration of the spectators, says the New York Sun. Their size, for they are above the ordinary build, suggests in itself the idea of strength, while the uniformly shaped head and large, prominent eyes tell of the intelligence of the animal. The horse is as much of the cavalryman's outfit as his saber or carbine, and he must needs possess the strength to endure long forced marches, and the understanding to be of the most possible benefit to his rider in fighting by requiring the east attention.

It is said that France expends annually $300,000 in the improvement of her horses, with a view to obtaining hardy-bred ani-mals, whose endurance makes them especially valuable for such irregular services as is required of the Cossacks of Russia, the Uhlans of Germany and our nounted infantry.

The United States does not spend nearly much, but it secures a class of horses high above the average, and by proper and humane treatment loses but a small per-centage of them. Moreover, the animal when it becomes the property of Uncle Sam fares better than its fellows, and ordinarily its life is continued in the service for some years beyond that of the horses of other armies.

Congress annually appropriates about $900,000 to be expended in the purchase of horses. This amount is divided pro rata among the divisions of the army, those on the Atlantic coast not requiring as large a sum as the cavalry on the frontier, where the life of the animal is not altogether one of lazy contentment. In Arizona, especially, the equine mortality is greater than in any other section, and more horses become disabled and unfit for further service. The burning sands and alkali deserts lead to blindness and diseases of the hoof, and the animal has either to be shot or sold. The lack of proper pasturage and food also cuts an important figure in the life of the cavalry horse in the remote garrisons of the West, for while his Eastern brother is feeding luxuriantly on a full allowance of o ats and corn twice a day and sleeping in a comfortable stable, the Western horse is making a scanty meal on husks and sleeping in a ramshackle building that seems to have been especially constructed for a free circulation of air.

There are nearly 10,000 horses in use by the United States army. Of this number about ten per cent. are sold annually because of their unfitness for further cavalry or artillery duty, and about five per cent. are lost by death. So, in order to maintain the standard, it is necessary to purchase about 1,500 animals every year. When the stock of a garrison needs replenishing the Quartermaster-General's Department is notified. An advertisement inviting bids is inserted in the prominent papers and a contractentered into with the lowest bidder to deliver the horses at the desired point, if, after a suitable inspection by the Secretary of War, they meet the require-ments of the standard fixed by the army regulations. The regulations require that the horse shall be a gelding of uniform and hardy color; from fifteen to seventeen hands high; from four to eight years old, and weighing between 900 and 1,200 pounds for a cavalry horse and between 1.050 and 1,300 for artillery horses. There are other requirements necessary, such as the general build of the animals and their health. Whenever it becomes necessary to purchase the half-breed horses of California or Southern Texas the standard of the height is reduced to 141/2 hands. Long-legged, loose-jointed, long-bodied and narrow-chested horses, as well as those which are restive or vicious, are rejected.

Most of the horses used in the army are purchased in St. Louis and Louisville, alwhich they are desired for use, the idea bemals. The average cost of a horse is a trifle

As soon as the purchase is completed the horse is branded with the letters "U. S." on the left fore shoulder, and a complete descriptive list is made of him, which always accompanies him wherever he is transferred. The horses are distributed by the regimental commander, and the riders or drivers are not allowed to exchange them or permit any one else to use them.

With every troop of cavalry a record of the animals is kept, containing the description of every one received and transferred, showing the kind, name, age, size, color, marks, brands, or other peculiarities, how and when acquired and disposed of, the name of its rider and driver, and the use to which it is applied. The forage ration for a horse is fourteen pounds of hay and twelve pounds of oats, corn or barley, and in special cases of hard service or exposure the grain ration is usually increased three pounds. In localities where good grazing is practicable for a considerable portion of the day, or during sea-sons when little labor is required of the animals, the ration is usually reduced. The animals usually last about six years, and at the end of that time are sold at auction, or before if they are disabled so as to be unfit for service. When sold the of-ficer puts another brand on the horse, making it impossible for the horse to be sold to the Government at some other point. Condemned animals do not bring very much. They are worthless for carriage purposes, and are too much worn out to be fit for the more arduous work of street car hauling. They are usually sold to contractors who employ them in hauling small loads. But the army horse does not last long after he drops out of the service. Usually he does not amount to much when the Government has no further use for his services, and his career thereafter is as short as it is un-

THE CONDUCTOR'S CHECK.

One Thing That a Woman Can Not Pos-sibly Understand. If there is any one thing that a woman can not possibly understand, it is the agile conductor's check. She can bear to manage her ticket that she buys very well but when it comes to subduing the fiery, untamed conductor's check, she is at a and all powers of perception avail her naught.

As soon as it is given her in exchange for the ticket, says Railway Topics, she puts it in her pocket-book so that she may not for-get where it is, but when the conductor comes round again and wants to gaze on it just for old acquaintance sake, she can not remember for the life of her where it has gone, and she looks through all her pockets, then on the floor, but it does not appear. Next she gets up, moves out into the aisle, examines the seat, and shakes her skirts; but it is only after the conductor has passed on, telling her that he will stop on his way back, that she remembers putting it in her pocket-book.

novel that she has purchased from the train boy. Something, however, attracts her attention, or she does not find the story interesting, so she closes the book, putting the check in to mark the place. This time the check is gone. The conductor may fret and fume, but he will never see that check again. She assures him that he took it up at the last station, and when he tells her that he never did so, she becomes angry, and if he persists, she declares that she will report him, and fully makes up her mind before she leaves the train that she will have him dismissed as soon as she can write to the superintendent. By and by she opens the novel that she bought on the train and finds the missing check. But she can never understand how it happened to get in between the leaves, she certainly never put it there, she can not account for it, and she never will. It is an unfathomable mystery.

AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL. A Good Piece of Reading for Those Who

Love Home. "I've been watching an 'old-fashioned girl' for quite a long while," says a writer in the Fitchburg Sentinel, "and I want to tell you something about her."

Her dresses, etc., were made in modern style; but, bless you! she was so old-fash-loned that she arose in the morning when her mother did, helped set the table neatly, and cooked one or two dishes daintily, her own self.

She had "graduated," yet she did not think because of that fact that the kitchen was not good enough for her, O, no! She was so much behind the times that she actually washed the dishes, made her bed, dusted, and then began prepara-tions for the pudding for dinner. Now, wasn't she absurd, when she (following the accustomed rut) should have been lying on the parlor sofa with the latest novel in her hand and her pug dog beside her? When her little brother came in crying because his kite was broken, instead of calling him a "horrid boy," as is the fashion to do in some homes, she helped with her own hands to mend it. How could she be in such small business?

After dinner had been cleared away she produced a small work basket and pro-ceeded to mend the family stockings. Shocking! After her task was completed she acdition, and, although she met many fine looking gentlemen, she did not flirt with any of them, for, don't you know, she was so antiquated she would have been shocked at the idea. As if it wasn't elevating to the intellect to be on the watch for some mas culine person to fascinate!

The girl of whom I am telling you was pretty looking, with a bright, fresh color in her face, brought on by plenty of exer-cise in the open air and in the kitchen. But I can't begin to tell you half this queer girl did, for you know she was so old-fashioned that she did whatever good deeds came into her heart to do; and her heart was such an antique affair that only pure, noble thoughts entered it. Her home was made bright and sunny by her presence, and yet she was not so perfect that she "died young." O, no! She lives to-day a girl who has "no se crets" from her mother!

THE WRONG MAN.

A Story of Macready, a Muscular Man and an Innocent Stranger. Macready used every agency "that nat ure put in his power" to make his acting tell. He neglected no aid of light and shade, no study of position, no minute at-tention to detail; indeed, no artifice what-ever that would heighten the effect.

The storm scene in "Lear" was one of the most powerful representations. An old man, tottering and exhausted, raving at the elements, and defying thunder, lightning and hail, is a touching spectacle. To employed a strong and muscular friend to spend a few moments in shaking him vigorously, first right and then left, then for ward and back, as a dog shakes a rat, till his hair was every way, and his general condition so mixed up that, when the mus-cular man gave him the final shove onto the stage, he was the very picture of a reeling, worn-out, used-up old man, and as be vented his rage on the stormy forces of nature the impression was tremendous. One night the strong man was somewhat though the general rule of late has been to late, and fearing that he would be behind-obtain the animals in the neighborhood in band in his part as "shaker," he rushed in burriedly to what he supposed was the right place, and, seeing an elderly-looking man with long, white hair peering about as though he expected somebody, he went forward and shook him-shook him powerfully shook him to make up for lost timeshook the daylight out of him, and then flung him headlong on to the stage." The pit saw it in a moment, and they hooted as only the pit of the old days could boot. The victim, scared almost to death, slunk back as quickly as possible to pri-vate life, and the stout party didn't quite take in the situation till the enraged Lear, indulging in a tall kind of rhetoric not found in Shakespeare, impressed upon him that he had manipulated the wrong man.

EGGS IN ALL STYLES.

Six Hundred Ways in France to Cook This Modest Viand. The French cuisine is said to boast no fewer than six hundred distinct modes of dressing eggs, says the London Telegraph, and a very considerable proportion of these recipes has lately been communicated to the British public in an opuscule written by the accomplished "chef" of the Duke of Bedford. As a rule, however, it may be said that ordinary middle-class English people know little, if any thing, about such subtile prep arations as "œufs a la duchesse," "a la Bourguoigonne," "a la Philipsbourg," "a l'eau de rose," "a la Coigny," or "au Pere Douillet." We are content to take our eggs as we take our pleasures, gravely and somewhat sadly. Yet eggs and bacon have not ceased to be a National dish. "Buttered eggs," "curried eggs" and "scrambled eggs" find a place in our "cuisine bourgeoise." Minced mutton is not considered complete without a poached egg, which is also, as the poetic cook put it, "as a buttercup in the meadows of spin-ach," and we use legions of hard-boiled eggs in salads and mayonnaises of yeal and ham pies, while curried eggs sometimes make their appearance on the breakfast table, and eggs filled with a forcement of anchovies and other ingredients are becoming a favorite "savory" at the end of din-ner. The plain boiled egg, however, is an aliment which is consumed to a much larger extent in England than in France, for the simple reason that at their first breakfast the French rarely take any thing beyond "cafe au lait" and bread and butter, while at their second repast, or "dejeuner a la fourchette," plain boiled eggs or "œufs a la fourchette," plain bolled eggs or "Guis a la coque" are only occasionally served, whereas at their early breakfast Englishmen scarcely think that they have discharged their duty to society unless they have demolished at least one boiled egg. To the prodigious number of shells which are cracked every morning between eight and nine o'clock must be added the equally actorishing number of eggs need in the astonishing number of eggs used in the making of puddings and cakes, the consumption of which is comparatively restricted across the channel. Paint for Shingle Roofs.

To make a good paint for shingle roofs that can be applied cold and dries quickly: Take one barrel of coal tar, ten pounds of asphaltum, ten pounds of ground slate; mix the aid of heat, and add two gallons of
